Church services ceased in 1839 but town meetings continued to be held in it until 1869. After being unused for many years, it was restored by the town in 1907, and a Meeting House Association was formed in 1911 through the efforts of Professor Franklin Hooper, director of the Museum of the Brooklyn Institute. Hooper was the great-great-grandson of one of the original members of the First Church of Rockingham at its organization in 1773.. The church is available today for weddings and other events under rules established by the town. It was declared a National Historic Landmark in 2000.
